Projects

Master's Thesis, Usability of Power Grid Systems

Analyzed how power grid operators understand and act on complex system data through visual interfaces. Built an interactive web-based simulation and conducted user studies comparing two interface designs, revealing how layout and interaction influence decision-making and usability.

Bachelor's Thesis, Viewer Perception of Frame Rates

Explored the impact of frame rate manipulation on viewer experience in video media. Designed an evaluation comparing original and artificially interpolated footage, demonstrating the potential of using different frame rates in TV and film.
